

Edward Elgar Publishing:
Handbook of Comparative Political Institutions
Edited by Adrian Vatter & Rahel Freiburghaus

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1. Introduction: History, contours, and current trends in the comparative study of political institutions

Part I. Theoretical and Methodological Foundations

2. Half a century of (neo-)institutionalist theory: Taking stock
3. Interpretative perspectives on political institutions
4. Qualitative-comparative, set-theoretic, and case-based methods in the comparative study of political institutions
5. Quantitative methods in the comparative study of political institutions
6. Data, data collection, and (computational) data processing in the comparative study of political institutions

Part II. Political Institutions in Comparative Perspective

7. Electoral systems
8. Political parties and party systems
9. Interest (advocacy) groups and interest (advocacy) group systems
10. Political executives and executive politics
11. Bureaucracy and comparative public administration
12. Legislatures and legislative politics
13. Bicameralism
14. Direct democracy and referendums
15. Constitutions, constitutional engineering, and constitutional amendments
16. Federalism and federal systems
17. Regional (subnational) political institutions
18. Judiciary and judicial politics
19. Media and media systems
20. Democratic innovations and deliberative institutions: New forums of citizen participation (e.g., citizen assemblies, mini-publics)

Part III. Origins, Interactions, Dynamics, Change, and Effects of Comparative Political Institutions

21. Origins and genesis of political institutions in a comparative perspective
22. Power concentration and power diffusion:
A new typology of political-institutional patterns of democracy
23. Beyond presidentialism and parliamentarism: A new typology of political-institutional design and the separation of powers
24. Policy effects of political institutions in a comparative perspective
25. Effects on politics of political institutions in a comparative perspective
26. How political institutions shape, and are shaped by the public

as of 18 May 2022
AV / rf